

The Underwater Afterlife of Memory

by Jerry Ratch

My fingers are shining in the underwater afterlife of memory searching for the nipple-sized mollusks searching for the solid nature of things left over from having lived a life at all

That new rain smell, specifically I remember that, with you

She loved sex
She loved having sex the moment of it, the romantic part She loved being chased and she loved especially being caught

That was you, wasn't it, kissing me in my dreams?
Admit it now

