

The Work of Beauty

by Jill Chan

I have to learn it,
the steady, persistent work
of beauty,
of surface that is not surface
but actuality,
time arriving rather than leaving,
a pause of breath,
of awe,
then envy that is not envy,
that insists on waking us
from our muddy play.

