

Summer Drive

by John Riley

Home is but a picture when a huffy welder's wand
ignites a fussy storm—
wind climbs too high to stop—shadows scurry up a rise
where rolling winecups
stitch a meadow to the sky.
See the crowd of purple sway—
a carpet flying by—
we travel on our way.

