

Feb 1

by Kait Mauro

He touched my forehead so lightly - his right hand, me on the left washing coffee mugs in the sink, to signal he needed to open the cupboard I was standing in front of, eye-level. On our wedding day he carried all of the furniture out of our small bedroom, created a sanctuary. This is what I need - strong and soft in equal parts.

