

Lire's Children, After the Swans

by Kirsty Logan

our spines curved like nutshells,
our wrists rubbed silver by chains,
our eyes misted white as goatskin.

900 years of dreams:

dollies & buttons & tripping to fairyland.

now freedom
tastes
of clean black soil.

