

DNA

by Kitty Boots

The undiluted blood of a thousand couplings runs through my veins, the Curse of the MacCrimmon's passed to my son.

The stones here are not unlike those of Barra,
birthed from the same crust, tumbled in a different sea.

They sing as I build cairns under ancient trees.

