for want of water

by Kitty Boots

I lost my gills eons ago abandoned the crystalline world fluid, undulating waving among the sea branches to crawl to land you, with your bronze scales and butterfly fins shimmered me with attention made pout-mouth on the glass and I turned up my collar as the pet shop boys sneered traced your movements with my finger

I could take you home but, all I have to offer is my skinny love