passing in, passing out

by Kitty Boots

I hate turnstiles and revolving doors captured for a few seconds, it evokes fear that I may not be able to escape, unlike the moon who escapes the violet clouds and wanders over the sky unrestrained by the tree limbs that seem to restrain his path and he shows himself again against a flawless sky the Scarlet Tanager at the bird bath bathes, drinks, shakes water droplets off her wings she'll be here for a short time. passing in, passing out the people of Ukraine blood-spattered, groping for safety, assurance it's just the Russians, passing in, passing out