

Home, Soldier

by Kurt Facknitz

I felt as if someone had pulled me in by the belt, or grabbed me by a knot in the hair, and kissed me with fire-engine lips. I was happy. I was in love. I couldn't feel my fingers or my toes or my brain. Then my lips went wet with something warm.

