It's Only Natural

by Laurel Snyder

The little girl pulling the puppy's tail Should stop her pulling. No amount Of force exerted will turn the puppy Inside out, or into a skylite snowball, Which is what she really really wants Even if she doesn't know the words yet.

When I slap her, her mother looks at me. Good mother. Bad me. The little girl Was being a naughty, but I was a worse. The mother was being a mother. Good Mothers sneer at people who touch kids. I slap people who tug puppies. I do.

I just like puppies, and slapping people. I can't help myself sometimes. Often. I mean—this time I probably could've, but so often I can't, so what's the use in sometimes— when the rest of the time, I'm me. A girl. A dog. A pulling.
