

October is the month when your dog dies

by Lynn Beighley

October is the month when your dog dies.
It is harsh, October. The light is golden, like weak tea.
All the leaves light up like embers and fall, spent.
Persistent things curl up and sleep without dreams.
It is, perhaps, a kindness to quickly end while the beauty of death burns all around.

