

a song for the sun

by M. F. Sullivan

what lion lies,
o king of flame
upon your golden crown?

a diadem
of porcelain fangs
arrayed with peacock's down.

slip thy nimble
fingers there
beneath my lunar gown

that quickened silver
they'll ignite
and in its flames i'll drown.

