a song for the sun

by M. F. Sullivan

what lion lies, o king of flame upon your golden crown?

a diadem of porcelain fangs arrayed with peacock's down.

slip thy nimble fingers there beneath my lunar gown that quickened silver they'll ignite and in its flames i'll drown.