

children

by M. F. Sullivan

today on the bus
a man in his fifties
smiled at a baby

while i wiggled my finger
at a dog
who stared with perked ears
over the shoulder
of a discontented owner.

