

Starlight

by Marda Miller

I've been chasing something that cannot be caught I need so much more of what I have not got longing to be somewhere where I am not and when we're all on board the starlight leads us forward

I've been trying fiercely to defy gravity slowly moving forward in my own galaxy careening at the speed of light but the traffic is too much the morning brings a static haze and I'm amazed

When the sun awakes I'll be leaving on a shooting star drifting further from the pieces of where you are in the stratosphere I'll be floating high above the world all the stars in space collide without a trace

I am looking under every single star searching all the places where I think you are knowing I will find out what I met you for turn around the sun is shining bright now

The starlight now has found me lost but I'm moving on through this maze of darkened space I will reach the sun comets shooting past me but I am not afraid until the day when we will be spectacular
