Too Late

by Marda Miller

he brought me kisses from New York little silver ones not realizing that on the west coast it had been raining for so long the miles in between both our lips had left nothing but a taste of bitter chocolate.