Drinking

by Mark Waldrop

After you started drinking your meals and hating politics

I wanted to climb inside, live in your stomach and dissolve.

I wanted to make you see, hold you captive with arms stretched, pinned.

listen again, swallow — don't choke because you are mine and I will show you how to love the world.