

Four Haikus

by Mark Waldrop

The crow in darkness;
visual palpitations
under the street lamp.

In the dark morning
my car disrupts the still cold;
a blister on earth.

Never mind the cat.
The Japanese Peace Lilly
will steal your last breath.

The blacktop highway;
a rough scab to cover the deep man-cut trenches.

