

Poppy Seeds

by Michael Seidel

It might have had something to do with the boy's pet hog, which was hulking, ageless, and liked eating poppy seed muffins. His father, always furious, took to the swine's throat with a stage knife that retracted into itself when pressed against any surface. Laughing, the boy said, "Can I lick the blade?"

