

Aunt and Uncle

by Michael Tusa

I pulled at her shirt like a slot machine.
Knowing I could get a hand of love or a slap.

And her little love would take me to his work in the dock yard.
And her little love would sing me Johnny Cash.

That was where I woke up on Easter.
And where I lost the Scrabble letters in the grass.

