

Mausoleum

by Miles Tepper

Take time to catch your dream like a child grabs at fireflies for the false comfort of their cold light

You see the marble slab beyond outstretched fingers in this room which hides the rotting flesh once loved — you might as well be blind

Held in by walls of ice you sense the light that warms.

