

MOURNING FLOWERS

by Nicolò Gallio

The gardens of Babylon
are empty again.
Kings and queens came back to the ancient desert to rise their children in the wise wilderness.
But you can still hear their hidin' laughing
running through the mourning flowers.

