What Happened To The Rain Dance?

by Peter Erich

The water quality
    will give you a hint

The cigar box reservoirs filled with yellow-brown nests of ash

This is the ruthless extinction of freshwater

Hunting glaciers down with plastic bottles

Searching for mud but drilling up thin dust

Resurrecting the rain by boiling the great lakes into deserts

Is this the end of the species?
    Probably,

but will it stay long enough for us to know what it is like underwater?

Available online at «http://fictionaut.com/stories/peter-erich/what-happened-to-the-rain-dance»
Copyright © 2014 Peter Erich. All rights reserved.