

The Medicine

by Philip F. Clark

It wasn't pain
but half of it,
 so half of it I mended,
leaving the other toil
for other days
that I could tend it.

 No chemistries seem strong enough; no alchemy exists, so half my head is healed and half my head persists.

