

Feeling fences

by Quirina Roode-Gutzmer

Grass and unseen shadow spears,
a line of lime-washed stakes he nears.
He got a sense of a fence,
for he could feel the pointed picket spears.
And thence he knew, ...
where this space ends,
and another begins.

