

BY THE BEACH

by Ramon Collins

Sara stretched out on the cool sand and thought about beach days with her children.

“A mother shouldn't have favorites, but one day my third daughter jumped high into the air and almost caught a seagull.”

Sara closed her eyes and dreamt of a land where gulls swooped too low and puppies didn't grow old.

