

New Forest

by Sara Crowley

An expanse of trees, grass, scrub, heathers, sky, space.

A grey horse, the type her gran would have placed a bet on, approaches.

"Don't like flies?" he asks.

He holds her gaze, walks closer. Seventeen black flies crawl over the right side of his head.

"What about these then?"

