

7 years for us

by Sara Fitzpatrick Comito

7 years for poetry for pumping in and out the blood of the heart for the exuberance of being one among many

the state crushes a peony and the poet writes with that new red ink. Subversion! to wrap the bruise inside bolts of silk and send it unfurling down the palace steps see what moans there, what broken bird within. The emperor can't have it.
Cut out blindfolds and bring your boot down on the naked cry. The stain upon many others cannot be discerned.

Lock down the compound. Confiscate all flares. Stuff the mouths with sweets and shuffle off the men to their work.
We'll show the world our synchronization.
It's the damn Olympic pregame 7 days a week. It's time. From now on, there will be no room for "tendencies."

7 years for breathing see the number bend like a crane for bleeding may it swoop, then fly for every molecule conspiring in vibration against the restraints hear the wings? they push the air past your face

Available online at «<http://fictionaut.com/stories/sara-fitzpatrick-comito/7-years-for-us>»

Copyright © 2013 Sara Fitzpatrick Comito. All rights reserved.

7 years for Zhu Yufu it is a white bird. An absolute kind of white. Something of your dreams
7 years for us.
white, as freedom

