I, TOO, DREAM....

by sara t.

In the immortal words of Dr. King I have a dream

I have a dream that one day My children wont fear yours That they will toss a ball Together in the park

I have a dream that one day When I'm at the market You and I, both mothers, will exchange recipes

Yes, I do, I do have a dream A dream that seems Impossible When fresh blood soaks the ground

But I have a dream.

I dream that some day
The blockades to your city will be lifted
The bag at my local café
Wont be checked

I dream that some day
I will walk freely, unafraid
For coffee
To your village

I dream that you Wont cower, in shame At the endless Checkpoints

I dream that no man, Will wake up to No more Wife No more Children

I dream that no mother Will exhalt her sons death To cope With her pain

I dream, so strongly So hopelessly, That when the sun rises Both our people Will dare to hope

And when it sets Dream, Of a better tomorrow
