

Chennai

by Sharanya Manivannan

I go to the sea and turn myself over in my hand like a shell: a hollow conch carried on the resonance of a song long past its singing.

My heart is a well
and this city, one that is forever in drought.

