

Dear Earth, On the Occasion of Your 40th Earth Day Birthday

by Sharon Hurlbut

Everyone is tromping around in work boots
like an army
of happy gardeners.
The park is smiling
from all this attention, from the sound of kids
who think work is play.
It's not even sunny
but we don't mind.
I know you don't.
Grey days are just as good.
They've marked off
Mama Duck's little nesting place and the handful of trilliums so they won't get trampled as we carry our loads of fresh mulch.
We spread it around
as if laying a blanket
over our own child.
Afterward, we eat cupcakes
with sprinkles
and sing the birthday song just for you, complete with cha-cha-chas.
And Many More, we sing.

And Many More.
