

The Great Dying, Pt. 2

by Smiley McGroucpants, Jr-Esq-III

Over 100 million years ago, a lot of living creatures kicked the bucket.

It was pretty sad.

But now — guess what? We've set the stage for a bigger — and better! — event.

Peak oil.

Unsustainable infrastructural debt — you like that concept? owed-from-before updates to institutions . . . think of it as a really, really full “IN” box.

Overpopulation. (Resource drain, and people walkin' round who “ain't raised right!”)

⅓ of the global economy is black-market; cartels all but rule Mexico, and that's obvious! (By now . . . other countries, hello? Russia? Malaysia? You wanna guess?)

Lockheed-Martin's a planet; there's other planets, sure, but most of us have a micro-economy to play with . . . “Have fun, kiddies! Use these Legos and building blocks.”

Focus on it.

“Great! Great. I got your message . . . yeah, it's a little long. It's 140 words, not characters . . . yeah, Tweet length, that's what we're paying you for . . . How 'bout, ‘SAVE THE PLANET, DICKHEADS’? ‘DON'T PARTY TOO HARD’? Nah, not at these rates — What? What's that you say? ‘KEEP COOL, BUT CARE’? Sounds good! That's the sort of original work we're paying you for . . . Say, you didn't get that from a novel, did you?”

TH'ENDE

Like • Comment • Regret

