

Event Particle (6)

by stephen hastings-king

Fragments from the clouds of rust that fall away from imploded stars arrive with the wind that comes hissing in fingers through the windows bringing a virus that replicates in the light bulbs that hang overhead from wires. Now there is something pulsing in the shovel against the window and its pompadour of snow.

