

Event Particle (8)

by stephen hastings-king

Forgetting fractures her body into a vast flower of fragments in motion as if vision is a play and this forgetting a change of scene that consists in lowering a clear kaleidoscope into the space between himself spectator and himself what is seen. The whole disappears into a sum of its parts.

