

High Notes

by Tim G. Young

It's the jazz of midnight juke box running off into the moon behind clouds.

A certain celebration never announced but always on the fringe of the fringe

Jazzy midnights
twisted like DNA
into trumpets, saxophones, stand up bass,
keyboards transmuted by the soul of the snake.

Stars spitting out the last of their light year light dancing naked in the wide open

Jazz feeling the earth spin the sway into the unmistakable rhythms of groove like heartbeats.

She said the midnight is the perfect way to fly into the perfect elegance.

Then when the juke box crashed the moon laughed hitting all the high notes.
