in the sun

by Tim G. Young

an artist sits in the sun moving fingers through long hair behind clouds a shadow vanishes long thoughts stand tall descriptions dance in the distance where's the phone? email intrudes smoke from a fire way over the hills snakes like grey ribbons while fire inside also burns more like candles and wax drifting slowly on flesh a call to other galaxies rarely returned mountains of graveyards sit on the very tip of the coffee spoon anger, hatred, and love dispensed from heartless machines dipped in solitude as sanctuary recedes like waves on a beach in the sun
