

With My Eye

by Tim G. Young

my space heater throws a pale orange light my white candles flicker in the middle of the night a lava lamp dances purple in disguise a television blinks with television eyes my toasted brown bread leaves crumbs on the counter my cream cheddar cheese is exactly what I wanted a dark red wine insists on reflecting a string of colored lights hung near the ceiling the chill on my back never quite leaves me though I try and I try the heat won't believe me but if something in the air can catch on fire then the sadness I feel may move and retire so I sit very still tuning my ears for a listen hoping for a response so I'll know what I'm missing and if there's a chance a thought does fly by then I'll write it down and see it with my eye

see it with my eye
